THE SHOW

For many days we murmured and roared and rapped and listened to the bells with no chimes tolling out time without even knowing what time it was.

Peeking through the window panes, we could see that things were in bad shape. When A asked "What'll we do?" we responded—in unison—
"START OVER." So, not just for compromise, we held a parade, invited everyone, and voted to spruce up the place (a little paint here, a dab of poster there). Oh, isn't life a terrible thing, thank God!

Of course, the traditionalists carried on, and those who cried had to be quieted down.

THEN WE WERE READY FOR THE SHOW.

EMOTIONAL? OH YES, THE SHOW IS EMOTIONAL

*Deddy your a cool dude and hope we will know each other for along time in the future!
 Dong Hopper
 1971*

Step one: put a tall dude in charge: Dr. Alex Rudoff would do just fine. Then make Joannie Gholar president, especially since it's the year of Women's Lib and fine little people with violins for background music. Diana Price will cry on cue: "It's the show! The show has begun and will progress!" The Davis twins become excited, too, and all happy and Breck shampoo, breathlessly so. How to contain all this overflowingness? Line up the big ones, the muscles; let them be the Varsity, keeping things under control. They are Holmes, Musselman, Albee, Bato, Snow, Fredericks, Lee, Stavroulakis; Hopper, Holman, Jones, Crippen, Guzman, Gibble, Grubbs, Payne, Sarafian, Findley, Whitworth, Daniels, Shephard, Schuill, Martinez, Glassbrook.

Music backgrounds The Show as Concert Choir llers come to life, all happy, and wearing those traditional "show time" smiles. A roaming Madquin quiets the roar of "Encore, encore!" just in time to observe the Thursday morning flag raising, while members of the Senatus Populusque Romanus silently seal their pact of "Rum, Romanism, and Rebellion." Some only look on in reverent awe, ready for their moment in The Show. Act I: Scene III—curtains swirling down—oh! Standing room only for Joannie Gholar, rehearsing her speech in the solitary aloneness of her private dressing room. It's the little lady's big moment, her chance to have her name in bright lights.

Ted, with a little practice you'll be another great Juan Till then keep working
Have a fun summer
Juan

"I know my courage!" bleats John Hostetter to whatever etched spirits watch over doomed dune buggies and Bubo Busters. Martha Laird writes secret love notes to JoJo, long planted in Barnum and Bailey's New Jersey Yard. Oh, enough of the in-stuff. The Show is not limited to The Cools. We even accept bodyless heads of coaches in football pictures and all those Future Business Leaders anxiously awaiting their big chance to make good in the 'show biz' of life. Music swelling, tempo rising, out of their converted bus garage, the Band (don't accept a Show without a band) . . . well, the Band goes boom-boom and Hostetter goes boom-boom and Miss Stone goes boom-boom and BOOM, The Show is beginning to BOOM. It would be nice to know that we have a sure-fire hit brewing, but what is the measuring stick, and did you know the backers are beginning to get worried? Is it too late to turn back and pretend that we don't really care, that The Show is something that should be happening at Arcadia High School and not at MHS?

Grumulkin Struts His Way Through a good one for me and I hope it has for you too. I only wish we could have had some classes together.

 You're really a nice guy. Teddy and I hope we can become even better

Intermission

It is Snack, and they sit and stand there on the front steps . . . and smile. People going by are impressed, warmed by the wholesomeness, the order, the idea of HOS-PI-TAL-IT-Y. But after Snack, they slither back inside, behind their iron curtains, like Vice-President Joylene Harvey, who hears the squeekly violining of a tiny hunchbacked Grumulkin. He is used during intermission, used. But his music dies out, and suddenly the music becomes orchestra, and Chaucerian-like pageantry begins as The Show's "chosen ones" parade on their big night of bright, Homecoming lights. Not enough? Like all the others you want lots and lots for your money? Then we can always offer some cheesecake, more of the poisedness we offer on the front steps at Snack: the Janets Boyer and Draper. We have taken lessons in cake decorating and packaging, so we know when to keep Grumulkin under cover.

HEY TAKAO

 Go CRUISING Don't You SO Go CRUISING
 ON Your BICYCLE

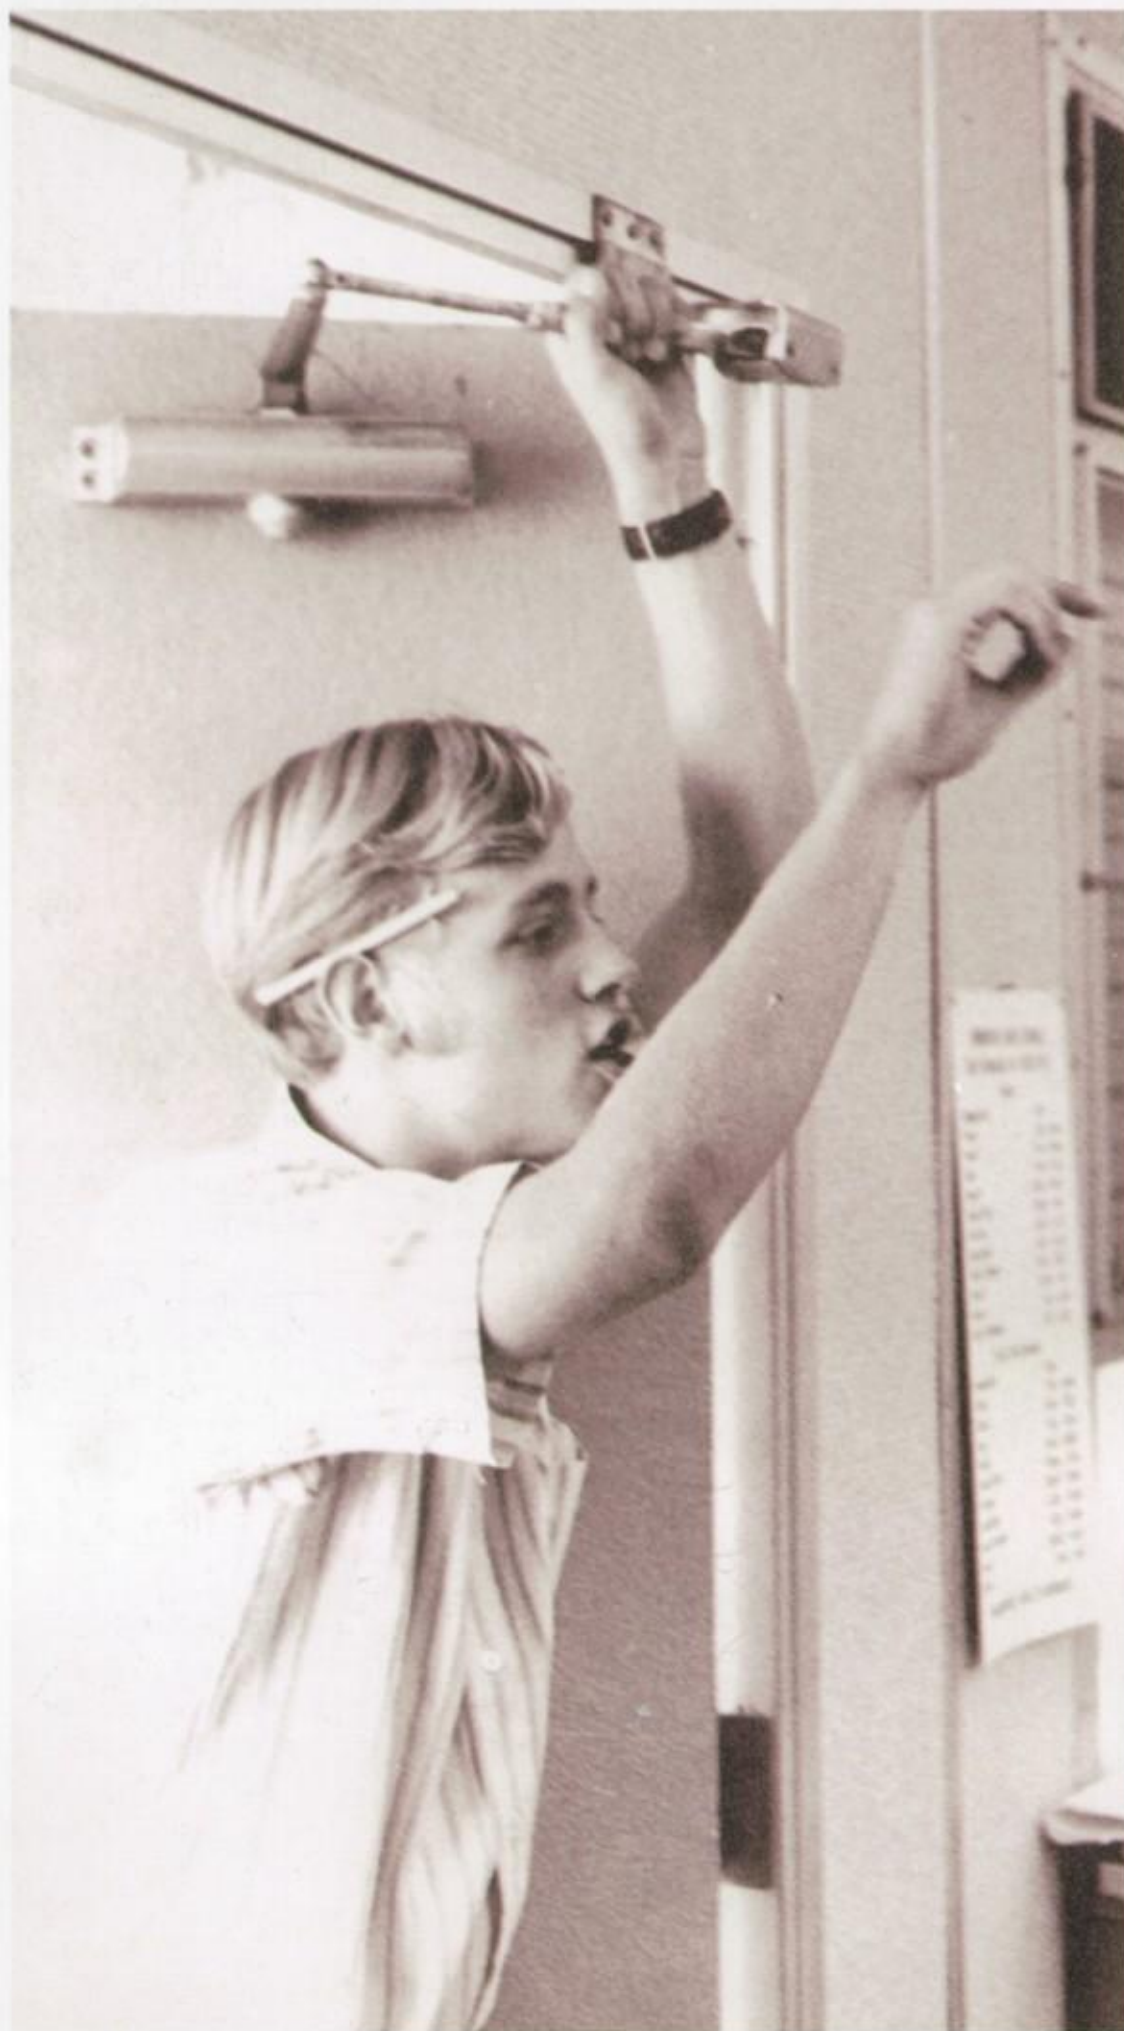

They stand there, posed (but looking elegantly Biblical), in some sort of symmetrical cobweb. But they limit their affection to hand holding, having read the Student Handbook carefully. Observers! At least, however, an audience for Brad Morissette as he intercepts a pass. Marty Platt, Director of Clubs this performance, refuses to mess with Big Louie or Louisa and climbs a tree to view The Show, restraining a desire to become, like Dennis Hupp, a bona-fide participant, even though a casualty of the preliminary rough stuff that preceded The Show's premiere performance that tried out a skit during Friday snack period. There is absolutely no need for such long sentences, and we have decided to keep the sentences tight in the The Show's Program.

*Teddy,
I have really enjoyed your

Ivy People Ignore Platt's Intermission

Marty Platt, making his bid for fame and fortune, brings ten minutes of Intermission to an end with a wave of the hand—the off-stage cue to the Grumulkin—just in time to escape forty trampling pairs of feet. And the violin music fades to the dismay of the four would-bes from INTERACT, lingering idly on the theater steps as the crowd passes by. Out on the front lawn, the seven wonders of nature seem to entrance nature's overflow of Ivy Leaguers, all looking smug—almost like they've got the KEY to the Happiness Club. Betsy Van Houten, like most of the other off-stage actors, seems to survey the scene with satisfaction—but you can tell that she secretly longs to be in the spotlight by the way she flashes back the 'ultra-brite' smile.

Okay

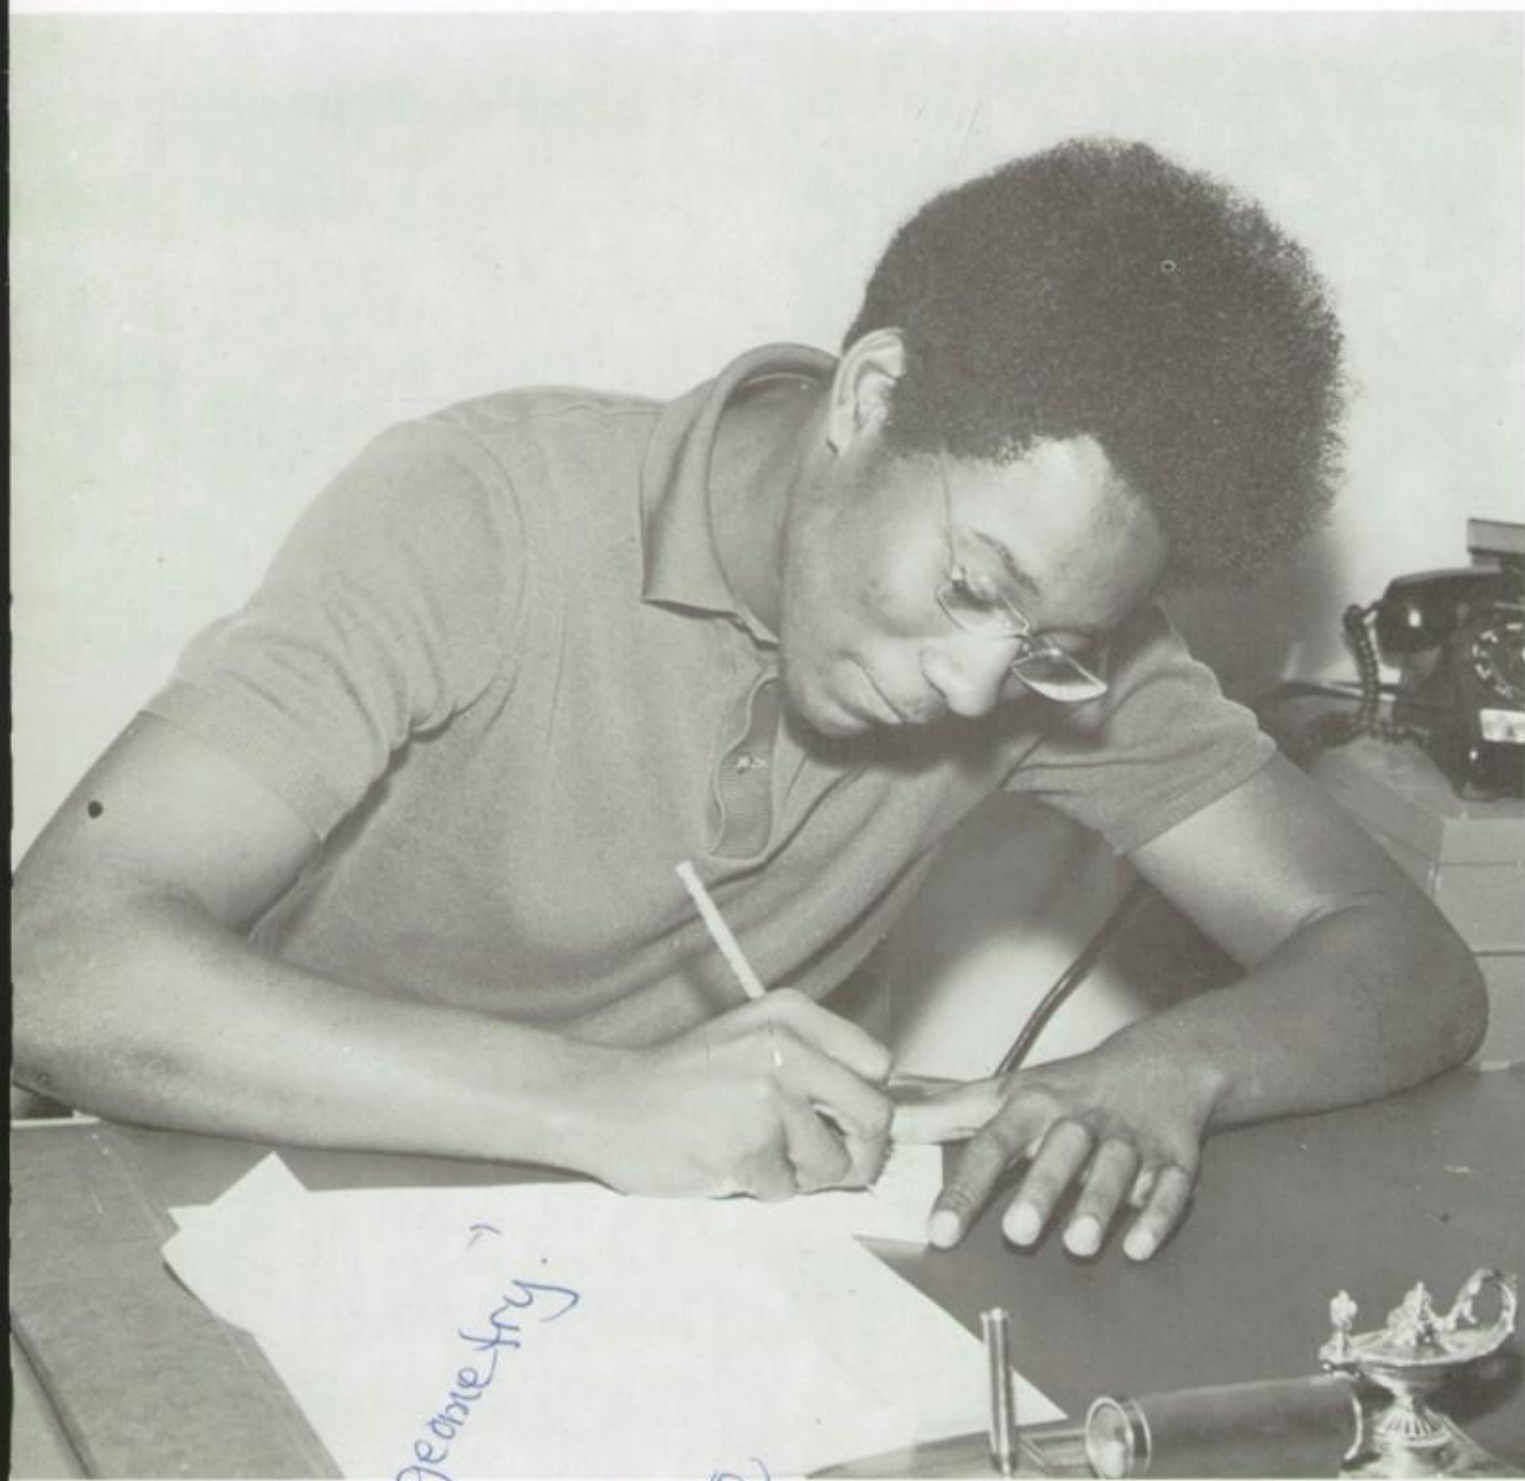

The Pep Stage is always in the limelight because it's a place out in the middle of nowhere where everyone who wants to be peppy is given an audition by Patty Perkins and Larry Williams, Co-Heads of Pep. But Nina Bruhns has already made it so she busies herself by stashing money in the bushes, disguised as a singing Polynesian dancer—but Mike Bailey saw her do it, and he knows that she's really Co-Head of Finance. But since Karen Lowden was obviously bored with the triviality of finances, we interrupted Modern Dancers in the midst of their practice for The Show. Obviously amused at our bravery, Tom Holman, Director of Student Activities, laughed at us, but Sue Kangas came to our defense with a funny smile.

The day was nice; sun was out. They took The Show outside onto the Pep Stage. ASB Secretary Arthur Buckley made telegraphic arrangements to import a troupe of Peruvian Indians (they defenestrate in public marvelously) but they were growing wheat; very busy. He had requested honest-to-goodness barmies, but none was to be had. Tom Holman laughed and then went back to sleep. However, the C football team requested "Lassie Goes to Rome"; it was already playing at the Crest. What to do on the stage? Make an announcement: To avoid danger of suffocation, keep this plastic bag away from babies and children and Patty Reindeau. People applauded and went back in to classes.

The cast needed checking. Would they fit their roles, wear their masks? Janet Steed knew they would, then lined up Susie Young and Jeff Kruttsch and all their American Field Service people—A-okay. Yes, and the Assembly Committee agreed, too. But Rance Reed, expert at this sort of thing, said, "We need more womens." No one doubted Rance, for he was the one who yelled "sick society" in the first place. There was an albino with awkward eyes (Rance agreed she was a woman) and in some way related to Dali; whatever, she would be welcome. She'd fit, complement, so she was signed on. The Human Relations committee gave its stamp of approval, and everyone laughed (smiled at least) except John Glesby, who grumbled, "No way!"

Put a snake on a stick, and everybody becomes fascinated. People faint and go funny, get dramatic with the hands, and join the B football team so they can get their green shirts, all of them with numbers across the chest. The Stage Crew will set up the whole fondoodle, make the whole thing look Biblical, if you like. Suzie Young and Jeff Krutzsch, AFS leaders, try to simulate the scene, and end up calling it "The Brazen Serpent in the Wilderness." But before there is anything definite, before anything is put behind The Show's curtains, the brains are called in: Terry Cannon, who writes themes like no other, who knows of a moated high school in Orange County. He is grilled by Seniors Ronnie Chodos and Janet Steed. Terry says "Why not," grabs Ronnie's apple and leaves.

Of course the Friendship Circle is the appropriate place for Co-heads Joyce Hurst and Dan Guzman to promote Human Relations, which is great because they're taking care of the Involvement part of the '71 motto, but Water Polo deserves some praise, too, because it's taking of the Excellence part of it. Pep Cats fulfill everything with their flashy neon smiles. Backstage, ASB Technician Mark Johnson anxiously waits to remove a wandering minstrel, innocently singing his way on stage to introduce a new act: "Five for the running—All for The Show—If everyone's ready—Let's watch Track stars Go!"

No, No Show Without Cheesecake

Oh, the backers are worried; they've sunk a lot of money into this Show. So one day a rushed note arrives: "MORE CHEESECAKE." Darien Pope said ABSOLUTELY NOT! "They're barmies anyway," she was quoted in the Wildcat. "Keep it in the present tense," yelled Linda Miller, Wildcat editor, who is very conscious about that sort of thing. She said she'd sit on a wall and look pretty; she'd do her bit. We take her picture; she looks good, fine. Then Suzie Young offers to pretty up the place. Linda sings "You've come a long way, baby, to get to where you got to today." Suzie gets jealous, cries, ruins her make-up, and slows down Act I. Now, it's okay to slow down a bit, but The Show must go on. Call in Show doctors Susan Barrett and Nan Clark from their duties as Co-heads of Homecoming and put them to work. They put Darien in her place, quiet down Miss Young, and Joanne Liscomb writes an ode celebrating the talents of Mark Schrey and other celebrated freshmen. See, it always turns out all right; just a matter of time, you know.

A round of applause arose from the crowd as Janet Steed, an infamous character from the Pep Cat Chorus, sauntered nonchalantly across the stage, really lapping up all the glory a Pep Cat should; and then the crowd heard her uttering "My gosh!" so they told Peggy Dennis and Mike Bailey, Co-heads of Class Competition. The Seniors were immediately dropped ten points in the PTA drive. Actors in GERMAN CLUB carried on tradition (Mrs. Campbell said that someone had to because people would wonder enough about Diana Price playing "feed the STAFFERS"). Then Marina—RAH! broke all tradition, tore down the streamers, a whole afternoon of Monarc-Madquin effort. But the VARSITY TRACK TEAM kept on running and Robert Miller came from behind to take the lead because he saw the Belly-Man just ahead and then BANG!—everyone out of the starting block and no more frightening illusions for John Osbrink. Remaining calm, and posed perfectly as usual, Patti Callahan, Director of Arts, sits on the Senior Wall, wondering about Glesby and Bailey up in a tree—NO WAY!

Nobody Knows the Trouble We've Seen Putting on a Really Great Show

The people at the top of this page made up the program for The Show. They are Dave Warner, Randy Dalrymple, Ron Peterson, Janet Steed, Gayle Shier, Barbie Crist, Darien Pope, Arthur Collins, Diana Price, Paul Weaver, Editor Ronnie Chodos, Joannie Gholar, Candee Clark, and Mr. Jansson.

And today the Good GROOMING COMMISSION got all dressed up and lined up very orderly in the Dance Room just to see their mirrored example setting images on the polished floor; but they couldn't linger because Dancer David C. was waiting for his audition in The Show. But The Show has more than just pretty people—it has academic ones, too (and you can always tell who they are by the way Miss Vivian Elmgren looks at them), who find it more scholarly to search for images in a sidewalk. And a little girl like Joannie Gholar can't run a "really big show" like MHS without the backing of a Cabinet—forever directing The Show from the SAO.

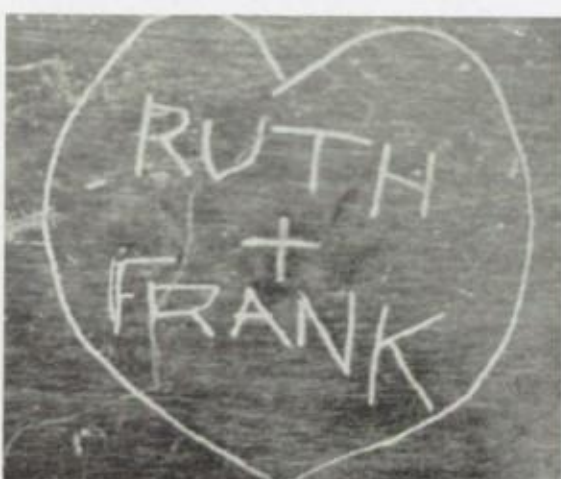

Education Is Important

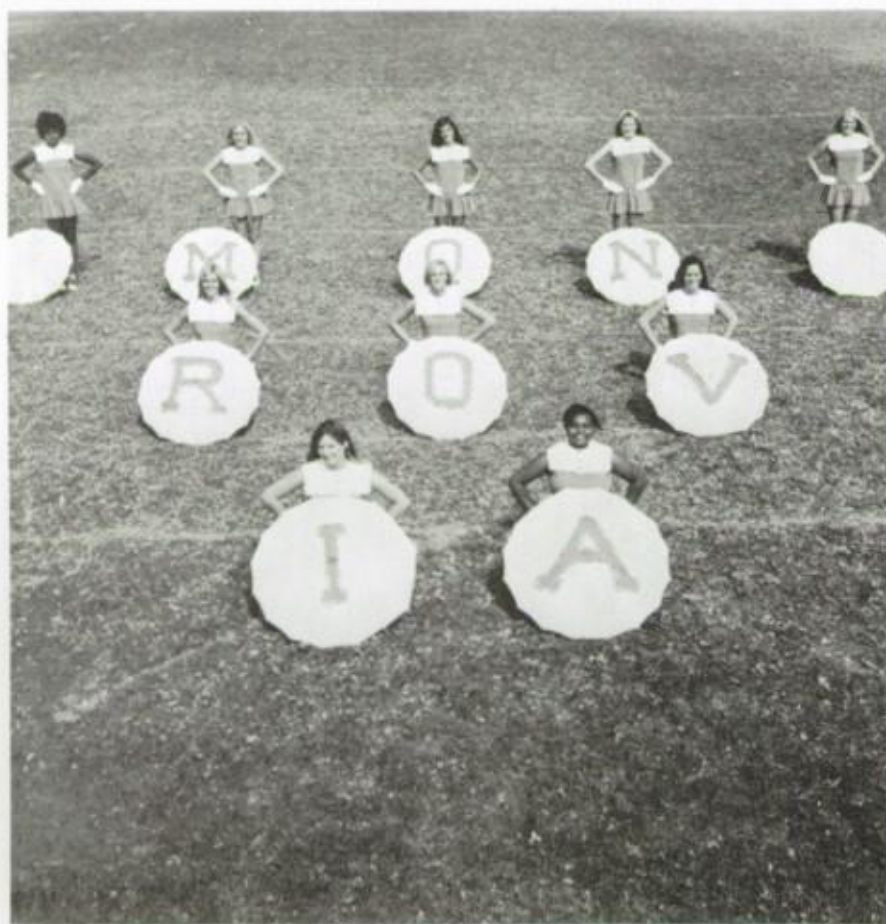

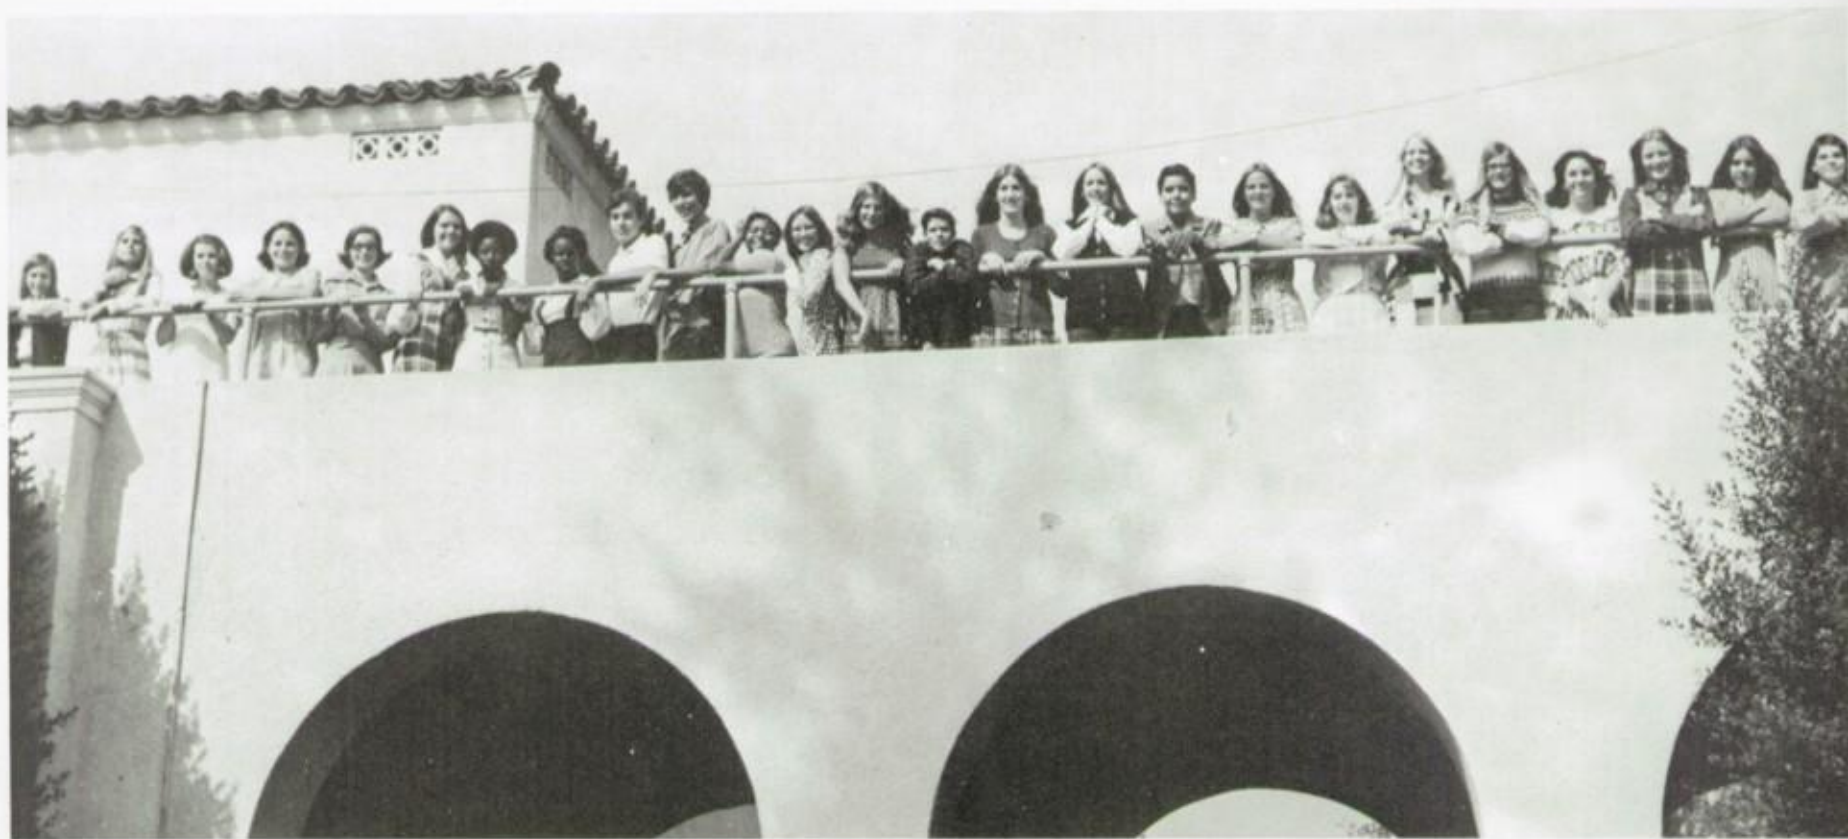

Candee Clark sat in the back row crying and eating popcorn. She was genial and polite, despite the stresses to which her difficult metier subjected her. And then Chris Wilson called her name, "Girls' League President, 1970-1971"—a 6' problem: whom to ask to the Co-ed? As a filler act they even let FUTURE TEACHERS make a brief appearance in The Show (but only after they had read Pilgrims' Progress) because Mr. Bunyan says that education is important. Lots of people say that, and sincerely. The Show always needs advertisement, so if you look out of Mrs. Tillman's office at 10 o'clock you can see The Show's barkers stopping traffic on Colorado Blvd. frantically proclaiming the continuous performance. Yeah, Mrs. Tillman can level and make a performer think and feel like star billing.

Always dramatically displaying themselves, Forensickers halted their parade of personalities to a standstill just long enough for publicity—they made attention seeking legal, even wanted Rod McKuen on this yearbook cover. Everyone publicized The Show, and the BANNER GIRLS even did their part in the Glendora Parade; they weren't needed at half-time because the football players were successful enough in stunning Girls' League mum sellers Candee Clark and Darien Pope. Don Peterson turned just in time to see the season finish with a grand exit, and was locked in a most savage and terrible innocence. And when The Show needed cleaning up, FUTURE NURSES just mingled in front of the Health Center but promised never to fail in times of epidemic.

Dad,

Life Becomes Absurd
With Exaltation

Here, in Monrovia, you don't let a head cold stop you. Instead, you get morale and Head Cheerleader Don Peterson to yell at the Pepcats to "step it up." But, as elsewhere in The Show, that Big Barnum and Bailey (Mike's dad) in the Sky, orders get crossed (ah, Life) and Lady Gholar begins getting calls about those "wild" Thespian people. Thespians could be, in sufficient numbers, you know, a major catastrophe, for we know that everything that exalts life at the same time increases its absurdity. In the interim, Bob Shephard, Director of Sports, concerns himself with contemplating whether dancing in Boys' P.E. to the beat of drums could really be considered "athletic." Others like the drums, however, and line up like . . . well, like Pepcats at its beat.

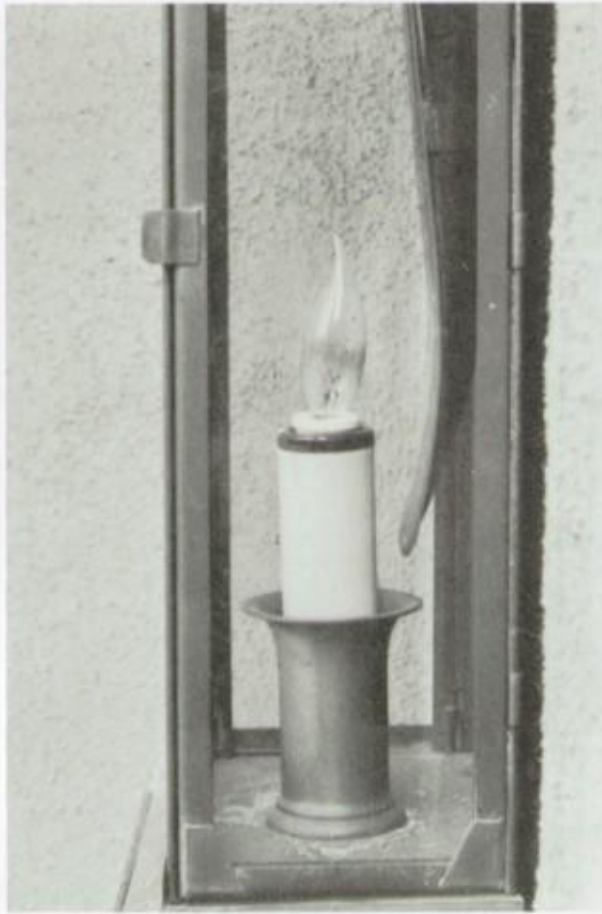

The doors were opened every day to the expected thousands, and then when no one showed up to watch the chess game, John Ferris consoled himself with spiteing everyone by sitting on the forbidden Wildcat mosaic. The players' spirits were dampened and cobwebs set in, but Patty and Larry, Co-heads of Pep, came to the rescue with a few cheers—they really helped out when Dave Schuill halted the football game to ponder the last down silently. (No one had time to notice the grafitti, and they didn't stop anything, not even the war.) Sue Kangas broke the silence with a monumental yelp, but Joylene Harvey didn't think it was serious enough to bring before the House. Wisdom is mostly gained at lunch anyways.

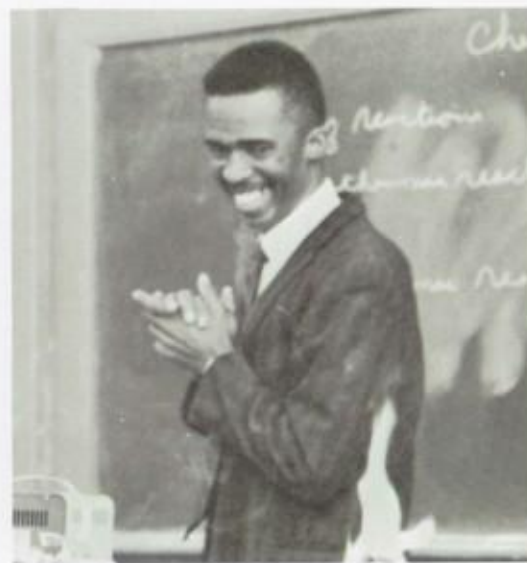

This Is Not a Savage Place

Outside, the lonely path to the Friendship Circle holds only a few puddles once splashed in, everyone now being seated in the auditorium, all eyes on Joannie—who doesn't seem to quite measure up to the Dr. Rudoff-sized podium. Madquin Martha Laird, once again having succeeded in restoring order among the massive group of students, finds a solitary, candle-lighted corner in which she diligently concentrates on her book throughout the weekly assemblies. Performing impressively for a place in the annals of football history, George Bato guards the ball with his life. But seasons change and with them sports' annals. STARTING POSITIONS, EVERYONE! Will our track star stay ahead of his hook-nosed competition? Only the reviews will tell.

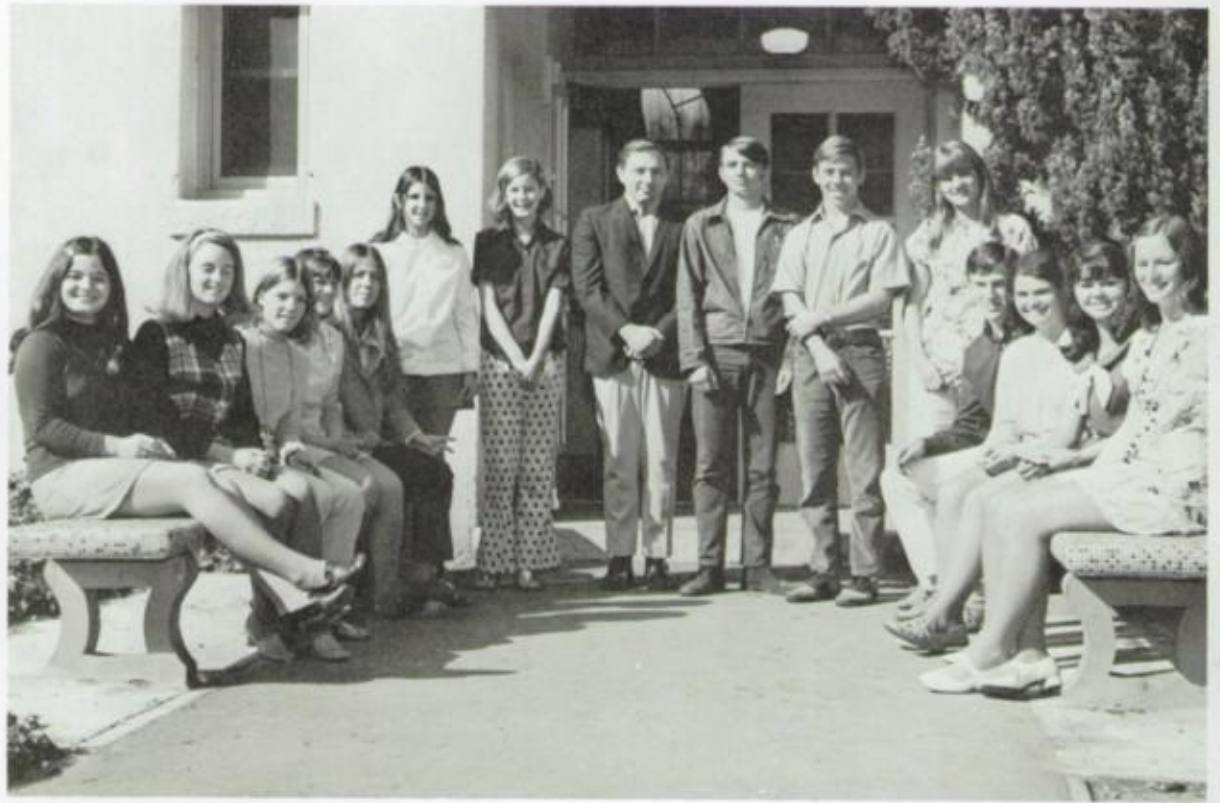

Mrs. Campbell blurted out, "Europe was fun—but Mr. Jansson didn't mind because he had come back with Darien's new word—'barmies'—and John Glesby incited everyone by trying to keep it a secret. Women's Lib happened everywhere, even on the MHS campus—Shakespeare would have never let Circle Mers onto the stage. At the end of the day all the Mary Magdalenes withered from the scene, but Mr. Ramey, not being one of them, lingered behind for one last prankish experiment only to be left behind locked gates.

Knees, Knees on the Desk

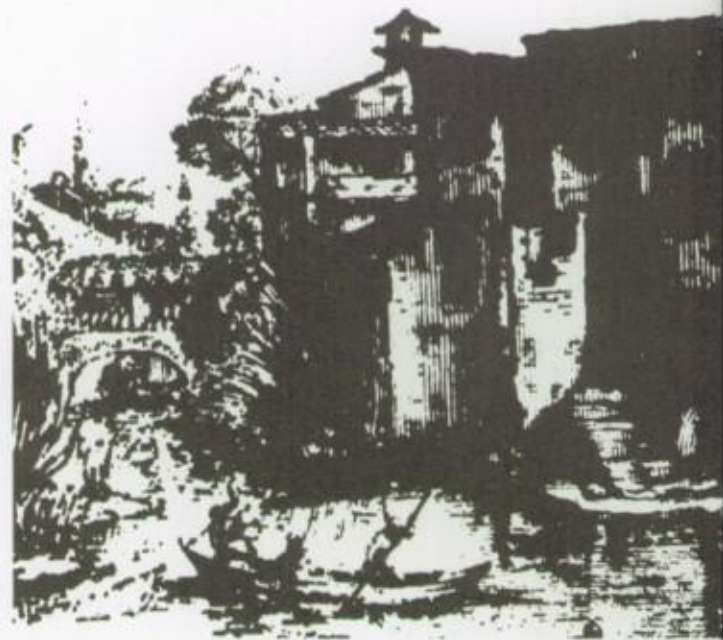

Strubbe's Knees Voted Best?

Pallateers undraped their masterpieces for all to see during the spring Art Festival, but members of Quill and Scroll refused to take notice because they were busy writing for posterity—witty things that would live on forever in the MHS library volumes. Contests were always going on just to keep the players involved in 'team Spirit,' so when ideas for conventional contests ran out they resorted to 'BEST LOOKING LEGS'. Even Mr. Strubbe entered in, feeling he had nothing to lose when he saw one of his knock-kneed competitors. Following this exhibition, it was decided that the more serious contests should be restored with Eddie Lee again rousing cheers with his valiant plays.

 I do hope our friendship will last. Yours a great guy

And Sometimes It Rained

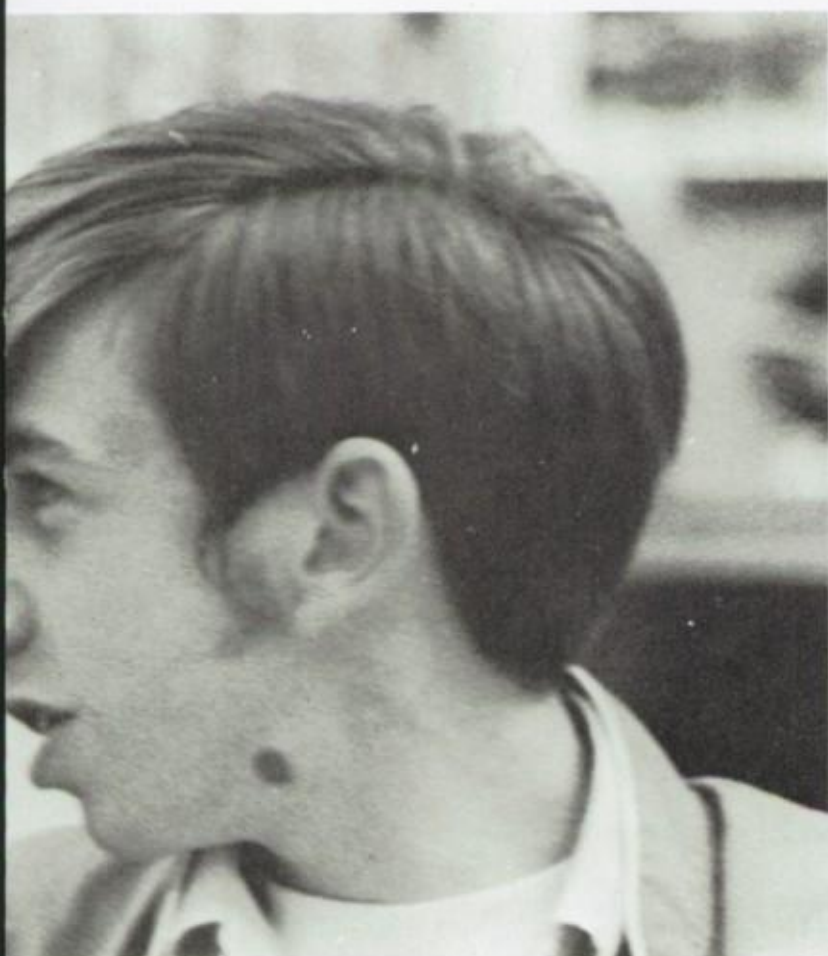

Once it rained for two days and two nights, but as soon as the sun shone again, Sharon St. Amand and Eric Snow, Co-Heads of E-Flag, were out scouring the campus and then, much to the backers' relief, the daily bulletin revealed that the MHS ratings were still high. Amidst the general scurry between classes, Mike Bailey could always be seen gathering a crowd while demonstrating the 'Bailey Technique'—this time . . . how to wink. But the crowd soon tired of this and dispersed to observe the more daring feats of Greg Belt-ridge, Marquee Commissioner. The rains resumed and those who were really hungry braved their way through the flooded passageway to the Cafeteria, but Bob Shephard seemed to be capable of drawing larger crowds in the basketball gym. But doesn't that lady wade like nobody else you've ever met? She is the best wading lady ever.

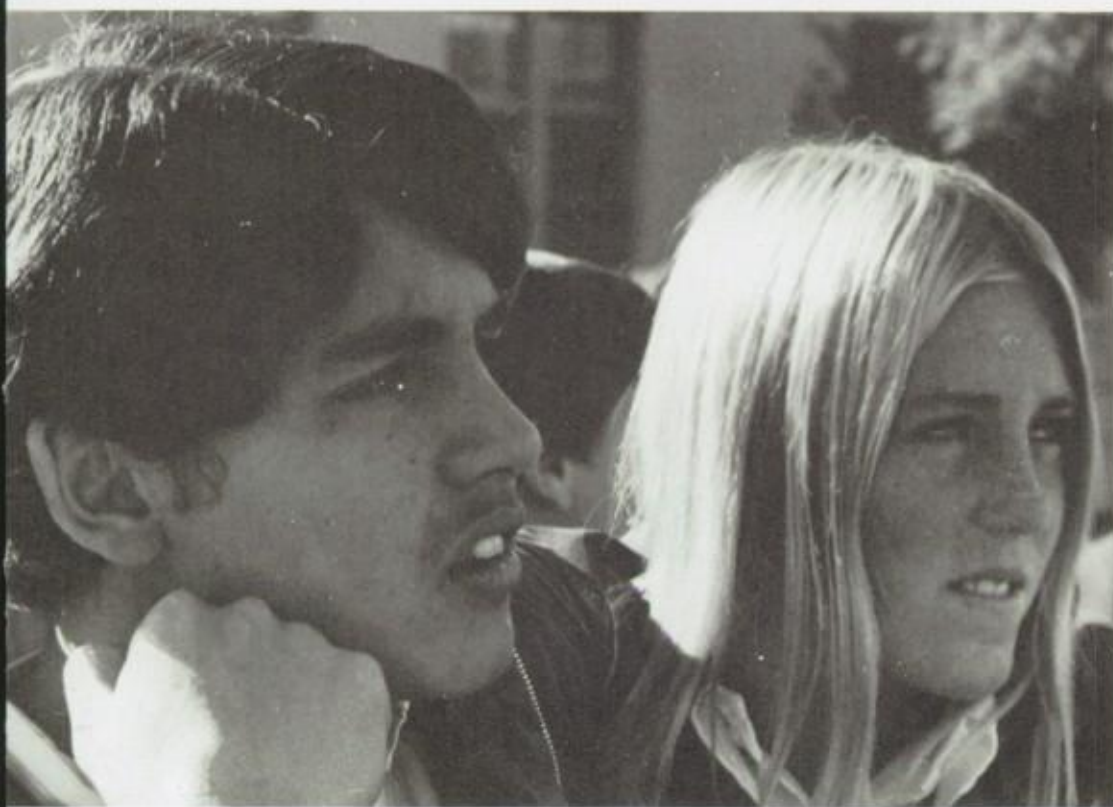

Teddy
 It has been great to get to know you. You are a very smart person in Spanish.

 Jodi
 Johnson

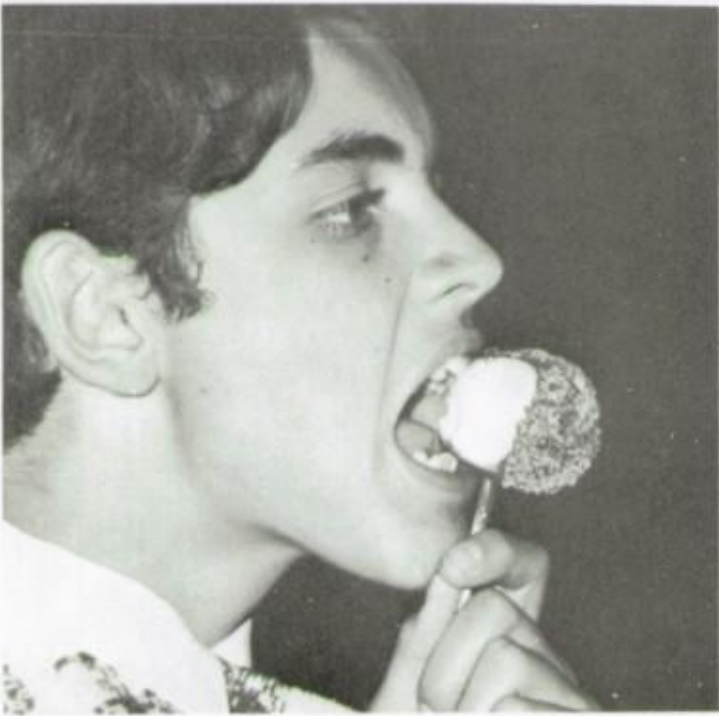

Unprecedented things were always happening in The Show, so the trampling of the sacred Wildcat picture went virtually unnoticed—but it did draw the attention of the under-the-bleacher crowd (which the External Affairs Committee labeled an improvement and immediately reported its findings to the Lions' Club). Randy Dalrymple also noticed the incident and it did flare his sense of patriotism a little. Photographer Paul Weaver insisted on a bird's eye view of the ASB and consequently ended up with a deserted looking picture of the Friendship Circle. David Allen, Senior Class President, began to feel the pressures of his position as he attempted each Thursday to divert his attention toward Monarc duties.

On days when the botany class had nothing else to do, it spent hours on raising a sunflower to gigantic proportions; the Catskills armed themselves with rackets and prepared to defend their court just in case any future problems arose from that kind of experiment. Contrary to popular belief, Concert Choir lers put on a benefit performance for passing motorists, but Larry Willaims and Barbara Livingstone, observing unimpressed, agreed that Rance Reed's Boys' League 'sock hops' were much more to their taste of entertainment.

Lots and Lots of People Hereabouts

Some people wouldn't conform—Shep set the precedent by purposely making a futile dash in the wrong direction; but the BSU couldn't be fooled, so the members contented themselves with hiding behind their pretense of conservative smiles as they secretly planned for successful soul dinners. Separatist Larry Williams independently munched on a candy apple while observing "Ballet of the Morned Pantaloons"—it was in History Club's catalogue of adventurous armchair travel recommendations. Sometimes cheer leaders promoted the constant sale of Sees' suckers—you could tell by that "WOW, QUICK ENERGY" written all over their faces. Major-ettes Barbara Gholar and Cheryl Morago were even convinced to sparkle in The Show's promotions.

There Was a Hunt for Fame

And they found him Bobby Ponce

The novices needed publicity in order to reach stardom, so the Wildcat staffers took it upon themselves to publish the beginners' feats. A whole page was even devoted to sports and pictures of infamous football and basketball plays. The Water Polo team lined up (that means in a kind of order, nice, neat, rows onetwothree) in perfect formation each day at 3:00 p.m., waiting for someone to show up and cheer (they had heard about school spirit in the daily bulletin and eventually decided that it probably didn't pertain to them). The football games always succeeded in drawing a spirited crowd and consequently left people like Kirby Willis yearning for their chance of discovery. Some of this was awfully nice, and there were those who thought that some day they would write a novel and make millions of dollars and win a Nobel Prize and bring themselves fame.

TED

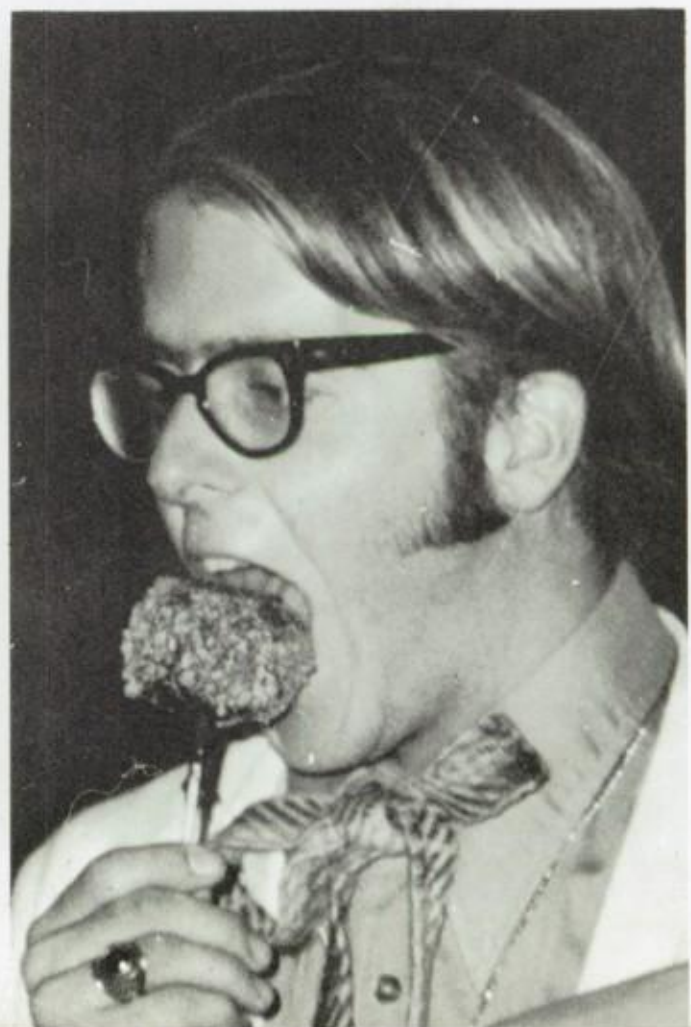

4 years have gone by now since we became friends and we have been friends real good. Only 2 years left. I hope you have good summer at the beach. See you in the summer.

Bobby Ponce

Sometimes (again) things went wrong, so three Justices were appointed to keep order—they were responsible for trying those who attempted to make Homecoming chaotic. The Act was a success and Barbie Monell, Queen of Homecoming, was given her chance to smile for the throngs. The crowds couldn't be expected to stay around (it was only a one-night stand), so everyone ended up mingling (past the point of hand-holding) at the Homecoming Dance. Craig Handly had a good time. But not everyone was concerned with flashy smiles and one-night stands; lectures to Martha Laird and John Glesby on the importance of bubo busters used during Shakespeare's time deserved just as much applause. And then some people could get jazzed by anything, Ron Peterson by just an apple, which, when you consider it, is what the witch gave to Snow White and Eve to Adam. It is not too difficult to see the value of an apple.

The misty people, the Bacchus types, were there, spiritually, whispering (like you know who) that cigarette smoking and chloroform are nasty, destructive. Max Glassbrook and Nancy Self accepted the idea willingly, but Darien Pope (eternal skeptic) and Marie Reddington had doubts. "Stick to building new buildings," someone said, "and even Ban the Bottle if you like." Is that Shelley way over on the left? Probably not.

Fences were built for a purpose, you know—rumors were that Mark Truman had contracted a vicious bite and the whole Show was put under quarantine. With not much to do for so many days, Gale Owen joined UMAS and immediately planned a Fiesta to liven things up, and then by the time Eric Snow had succeeded in totally ruining the festivities by insisting on soul food, the quarantine was removed. Everyone was reunited—Mr. Brochu found his dog (they do say that dog is man's best friend) and someone referred to his bliss off-handedly as Nirvana.

We Have a Lady Who Swings

Word got around that a lady swung on a swing—standing up. So people from all over got on the freeways and headed for Monrovia. Susanne Thomas thought about the problem of housing those thousands of people . . . and scratched her chin. The swinging lady herself said, "Go to Janet Draper and Janet Boyer and ask them." Both Janets and the Publicity Commission people met a little freshman boy, who said, "Put them in Quads." They did. And the people were happy. From the mouths of babes!

All of the people couldn't be kept happy all of the time, not even on sunny autumn afternoons—they tended to be lonely and full of lost things. Yes, vaudeville days were long ago replaced by doorstep dogs. Despite such days, the antics of Pat Thurston were not discouraged, not even by the consternating stares of the Jayvee muscle.

Sometimes football action was carried too far; the referees were too busy praying for rain—a sure sign was raindrops on an obscure pine branch. There were lots of nice things around, they said, if only the people would open their eyes and look. Weather conditions never prevented SPANISH CLUB activities; Darlene Long and Arthur Amparan appreciated their foreign cheers of “OLE,” giving him that added ‘umph!’ The campus apparently needed it too. At least Tom Holman and Jeff Bodner were always good for a side-show; it was discovered that they were the only ones who had the E-Flag effect when we didn’t have E-Flag. Pat Ryan didn’t mind; he went on shooting baskets, and the world went on spinning and throbbing, and all of it was part of The Show. That’s what The Show is all about, kiddies, if you haven’t caught on by this time. We hope you’re reading all this copy, for we consider it very good copy, worthy of your time, and you should know that we put in hours and hours writing all this copy. The Show is for you and for us and for Dr. Rudoff and Mrs. Thurston and her son Pat, who is getting pretty good with the camera, and we hope the cameras have recorded all the important events and that in twenty years when you look back through this book, you’ll find meaning again.

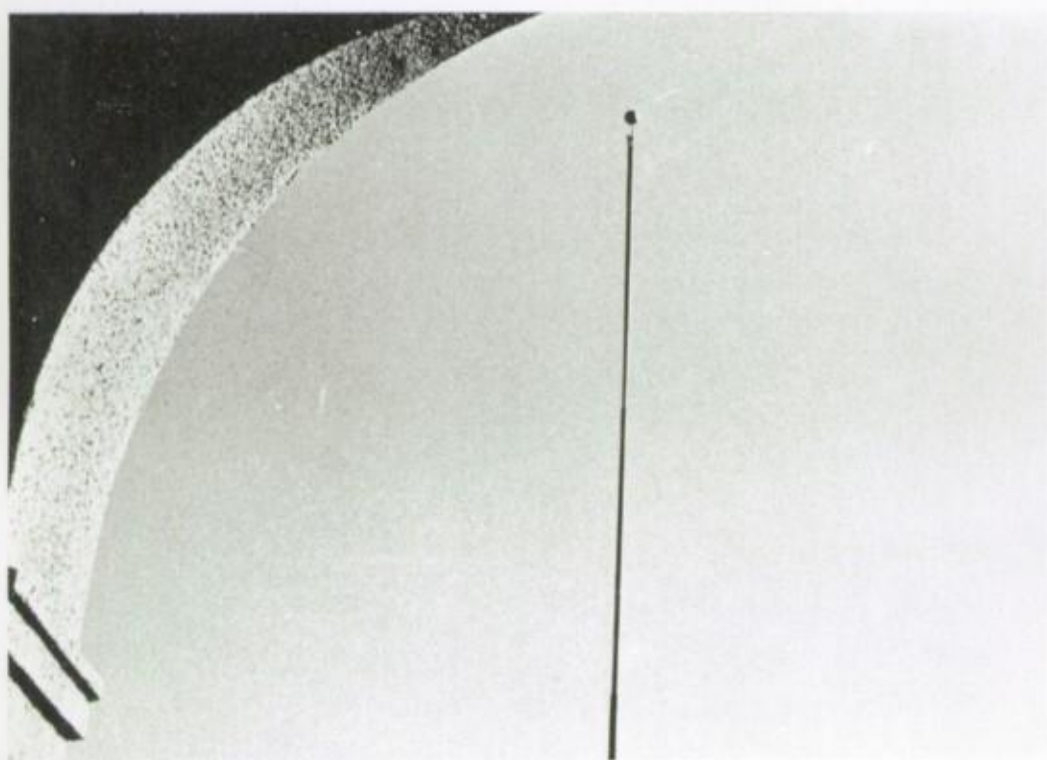

Arthur Collins eventually became disgusted—he refused to pay penance and Saint Marie justifiably peered at him through contemptuous eyes. She wasn't in any shape to say The Show Must Go On, but it did anyway. John Ferris, using the alias of Willie, rang the bell proclaiming victory over disgust, and rival cheer leaders celebrated by establishing a temporary brotherhood. The Girls' Swim Team was always behind locked gates, so it wasn't even affected by Arthur's obstinate views. GERMAN clubbers remained rowdy despite the facts—even Calvin was a little uncertain of their unconventional behavior. If you look carefully at the Swim Team, you will see that the feet aren't actually cut off, that we, too, were careful, that in The Show even minor details are important, that a job well done, no matter how menial, is valuable, to be praised. Arthur moved to La Jolla, and there he received praise. Arthur wants to become Albert Camus.

Some people were enthralled all year long with the heights of the insurmountable flagpole—and when they looked at it hard enough and long enough—which was usually on a Tuesday—they were convinced that the flag was visible. But you could never find Ronnie Chodos doing anything like that; she made it her job to ponder over the successes and failures of The Show and ended up overseeing the compiling of The Book. Whenever anyone began to question the wholesomeness of The Show, he was taken on a guided tour through the halls to interview the Future Homemakers. They gave him hot tea and reassured him of the real American values while the MHS Orchestra played the background music of "God Bless America." The JV Cheer Leaders weren't concerned with impressions; they were too busy secretly designing a master plot to eliminate the Varsity Cheer Leaders.

There Was a Lot of Talk About Hair During the Year

Absurd things were done, too—they wouldn't openly teach you how to master the art of combing non-existent hair on a waxed head, but it was common knowledge that frequent demonstrations were open to the underground public. On Wednesdays and Fridays there were other exhibitions — anonymous hands and a ball summoned rounds of invisible applause which echoed throughout the gym. There were those who saw this absurdity for what it was; they became recluses and wrote books on education. Steve McConnell denounced those people and decided to contribute something more substantial —so Mr. Brochu invited him to guest lecture the Ecology Club. And then when Boys' League instilled a new tradition, 'Nature Boy of the Month,' even Pep Cats assembled to choose Steve unanimously.

No Popcorn

Dylan used to love Caitlin and promised to buy her a sunrise—they are always SHOW-worthy north of Monrovia—when he came into the big money. Rance Reed dug the idea. And Barbi Crist, who always digs ideas, cried, then laughed, and finally moved into a euphoric trance. She was watched—not oggled, but watched by Barry Edwards and his chums, pun-makers all. There was the JOC influence to be considered, but not a one of them could juggle like the master. Brian Hiatt drove all over town looking for sunrises but ended up filming an epic dealing with pollution. As usual, things were becoming confusing, slightly spaced out, so somebody—this lack of specifics bothers us, too—called the Band, and those people went to the middle of the campus and played and strained and were loud. Marilyn Washington covered her ears ever so elegantly, sort of like Cleopatra, and told people she couldn't bear another harsh sound or hear herself whisper. When the noise stopped, that same somebody mentioned above cornered Nina Bruhns and asked, "Say, is there any place a mutant can get a decent meal around here?" Nina didn't have any answers, even though she is quite bright. Stefanie Saccoman, who can be pretty flip with the tongue but who, this time at least, revealed a warm heart, went prowling through her lunch bag and came up with goodies enough to make the somebody happy he was at Monrovia High. We are a Chaucerian Society, and Miss Saccoman fit in very nicely. It was decided that she should be upped from the ranks of usher at The Show, promoted. She accepted.

Ted,
You've really come a long way like all of us. Like the picture shows, your day will come, and when it does, take advantage of it, you're only on this earth for your own life.
Keep yourself in control this summer, and the years to come,
Later On
God Bless

GREEN MACHINE

Lunch was a time of solitude except if you were starving—Melody Willet knew what it meant, but Randy Musselman insisted that that kind of thing only occurred in Biafra, not in our Show. Martha Laird didn't have an opinion; she only felt bored with this idea of prestige. J.V. Cheerleaders were a little more enthusiastic (they started new traditions, if that's possible). They all had hopes of performing for the Varsity players, but that was virtually impossible. The Show brought a lot of rumors into the light: everyone now knows that scouting isn't out of date. Coach Tony Stillson smiled knowingly because he knew the facts behind all rumors, even the ones about CIF.

The Kid Makes Good

In an audience there is always a runny-nosed little urchin, somebody's kid who could be cute but is just plain mean, up to no good. So the trick is to give him a blanket or a spoon, and he will shut up for a while; put taps on his shoes and he'll end up a tap dancer for MGM or The Show, functional, bringing in a buck, at least. Lynnette Wilmoth shivered in disgust and said she'd never have a kid like that; even homework wasn't that bad. Mr. Strubbe looked, munched an apple, as Don Redmond laughed and refused to identify. The kid cried again. A loner in the German room, like Lynnette also disgusted, thought maybe the kid was some side-show attraction, but Rick Priebe said no, "the kid crept off an old cover of The Saturday Evening Post." "All right, enough," said Ron Dobes as he blanched, then hid from a confusing world in his stocking cap. Then, people in the Main Patio argued and said the kid was actually a midget spy from Azusa. So Janine Johnson wore her Madquin sweater, assumed a kind of authority, and drove them all away. That night they all gathered in the gym; the kid cried, then tap danced on the wood, and everyone went home sort of happy. There is a moral.

All eyes—almost—were on Pat Ryan as he drove for a crucial two points, and most of the time, the court was a pretty hot place, hot even for the big Hot Dog man, a meditative type caught in some transcendental state off stage. On the sideline Judy Walton admired Pat's agile form as Larry Williams admired Judy. Meanwhile, outside the gym, the drizzle couldn't stop the talking at the Senior Wall, the gossiping, the continual gossiping, about Mike Sarafian and George Bato's friendly antics. It was hot out there in the fall, and there were rumors of sunstroke and such. Nobody, as usual, listened much, but the talk went on. Even Mario and Drete were astonished by the football duo. And there was some talk of wild things to happen in February, of California sliding into the ocean after an earthquake and wrecking the chance of great things happening in CIF basketball. The pink bulletins in the morning said not to listen to these rumors, and people listened to the rumors, saying they wanted their full money's worth for The Show. It was a rather warm winter, and people were getting restless and lazily apathetic. Let them eat cake, somebody said.

The Show Shaken Quite Badly During Earthquake of Mid-February

There was a lot of talk about catastrophe in February, and one morning at six o'clock the earth shook, but people went to school and the earth shook some more. None of this shook the C basketball team, not even Mark Schrey. And Mark Mooneyham sat on a bench and told stories about the big quake, but nobody bothered to listen; he even claimed to have seen the eclipse at 12:47, but reports were that he had never left his bench. The catastrophies were minor, talked about, but minor. And, of course, The Show went on and on and on . . .

Senior Wall Shadow

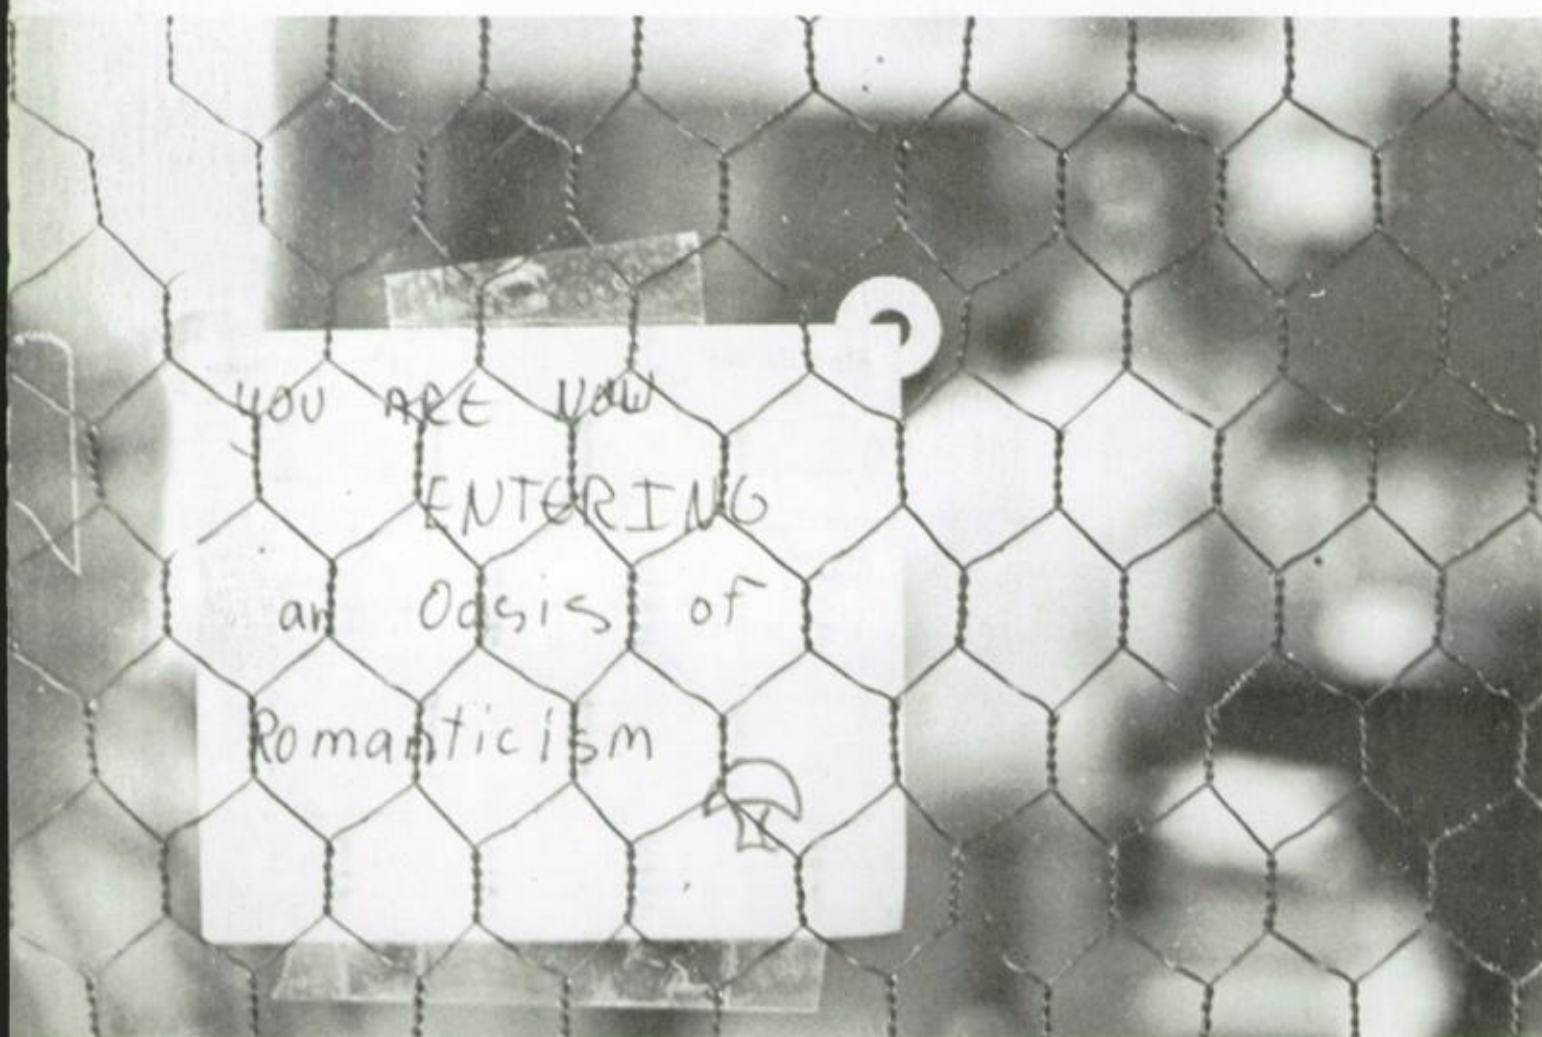

Spooky to Madites

There was a vague shadow on the Senior Wall one day, and Dennis Sullivan, absolutely spooked, yelled names at it; then there were those who completely refused to face the conventions of life and insisted on playing . . . games. However, the Big M flashed; some kid leaped over the rocks; everyone agreed it was the best assembly of the year. The Grumulkin was even persuaded to wait in the wings as first violinist on such a momentous occasion. Everyone knew what that obviously meant—the Orchestra wouldn't consent to perform at these more thrilling events.

Nobody Batted an Eye but Things Actually

Were Going on Up There on Life's Stage!

In the spring there continued to be earth tremors, and frightened eyes became haunted like those kids in "Valley of the Damned." There was a kind of refuge, a sanctuary, though, in lower Science, and frustration could be whacked at on the tennis court. As John Petranick whacked, his coach, Mr. Morgan O'Brien, smiled with the rest of the netmen, and afterwards they all whacked away, and anxiety was eased. Back in lower Science Duane Schuil dared the earth to move again, and Mrs. Campbell played Cat Stevens records and refused to cry. When trash barrels banged, she cringed and expected the worst. Custodians were alerted and waited expectantly for the tower to fall, to tumble. It all added a touch of melodrama to The Show.

Ted Mack Is Really Jealous

After an earthquake, everything gets back to normal, and so did The Show . . . but when it got too normal and needed an 'umph!' someone decided to put together a new act. It was rumored that kite flying was out of the question, but then the rumor was started by Harold Lawrence, and it wasn't to be completely believed. Aside from rumors, Hubert Frederick demanded a real space in The Show and exhibited perfection in warm-up. Only the Bee basketball team had patiently waited through the season for a chance to have its name in lights. It was given credit for at least putting out an effort and refusing to look puzzled and dazed for a little pitiful recognition. Jamie Sullivan and John Hostetter weren't on the Bee team . . . they could perform the way they wanted. Everyone performed: Sherry Cowart and Sheila Lebrecht confirmed that the variety surpassed even Ted Mack's Amateur Hour.

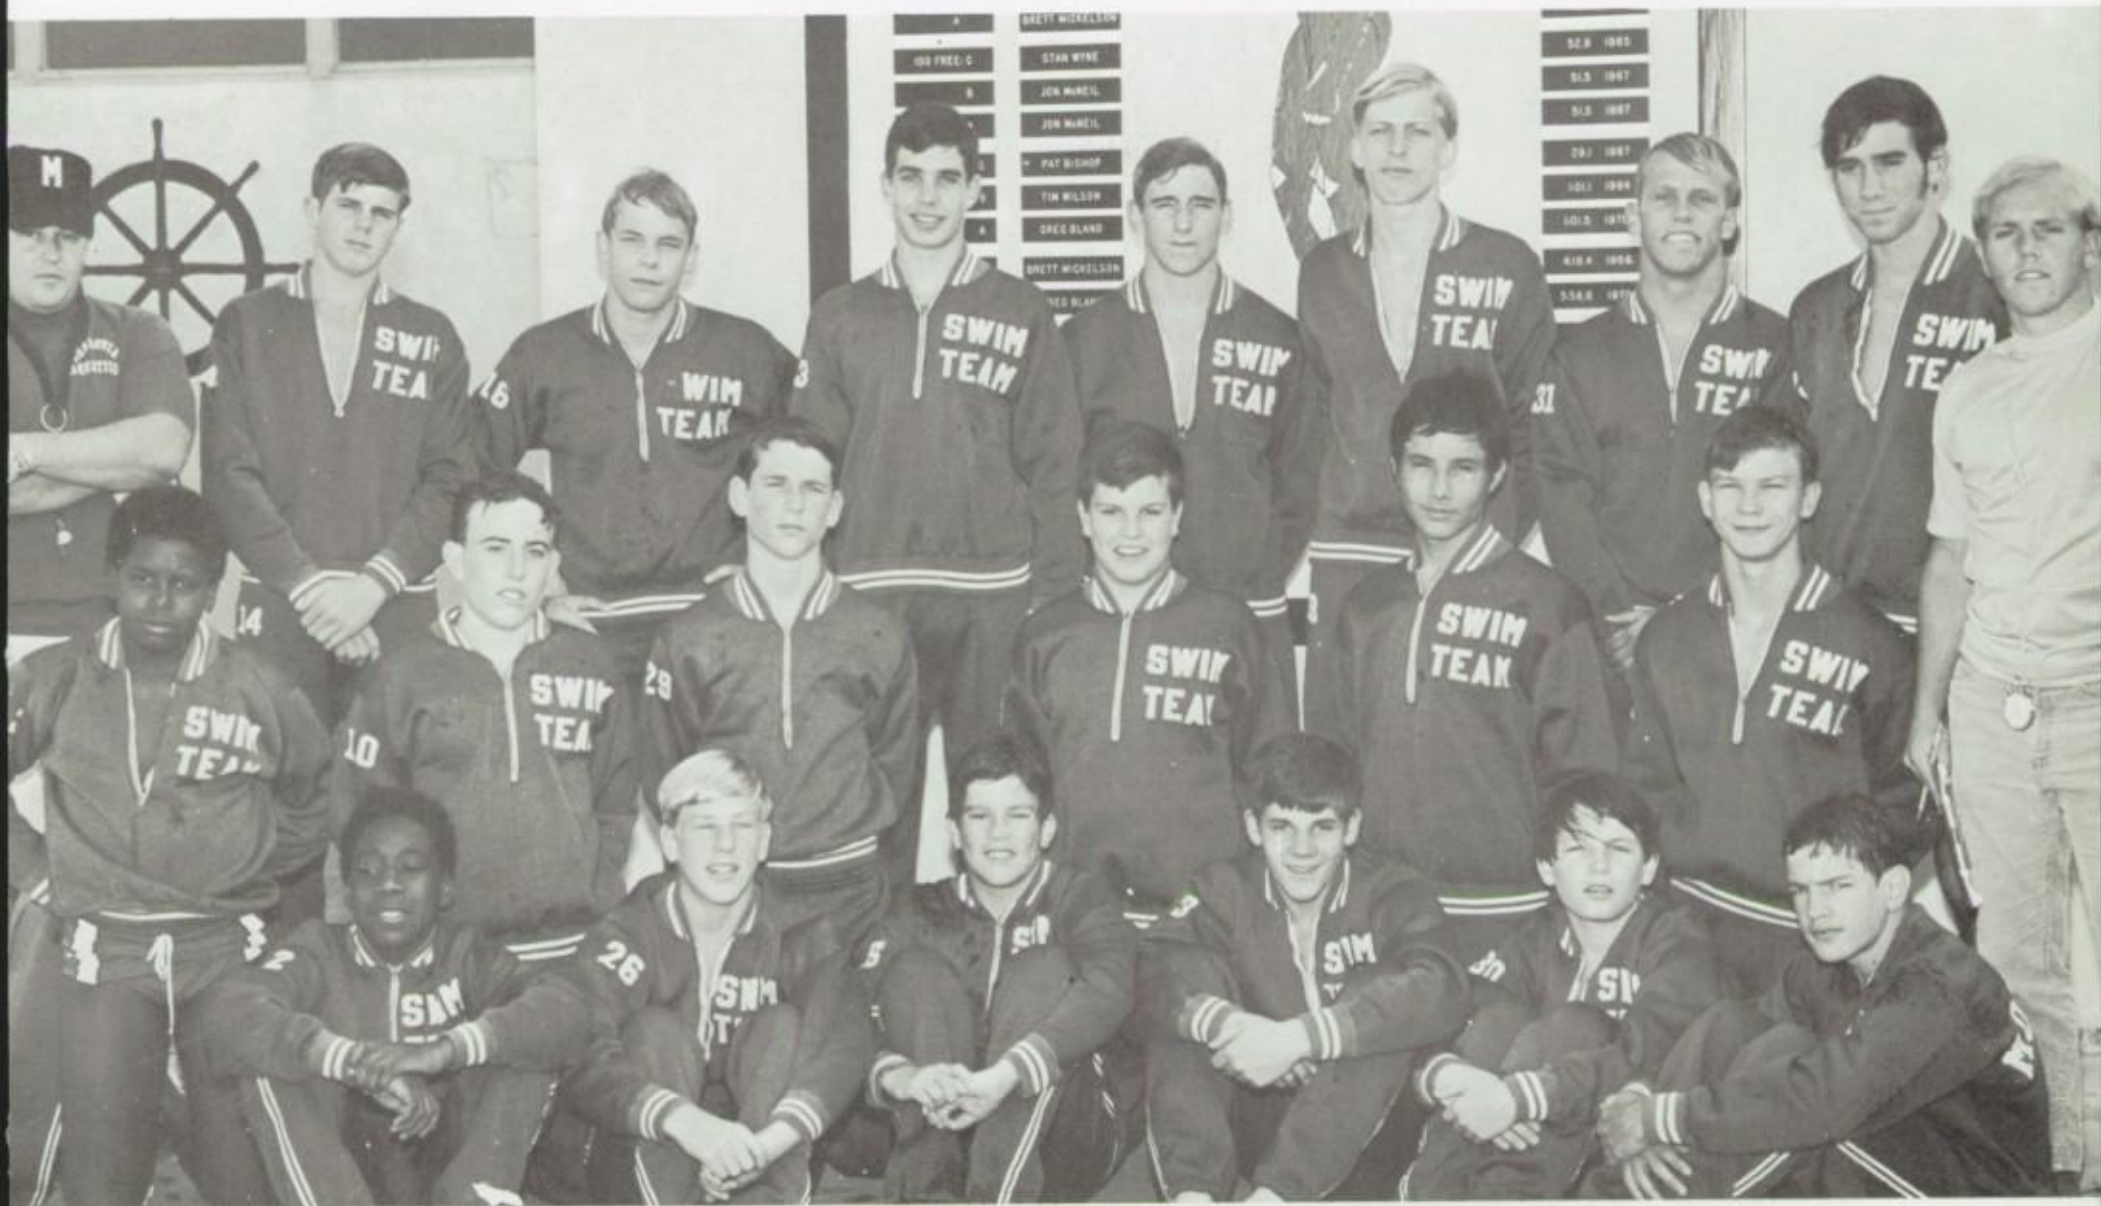

Sheila Sebrecht

It used to be that a raised finger was to test the direction of the wind, but in The Show it meant "Look at the Pep Cats"; and then basketball season ended and so did Pep Cats, Rah! But there were replacement performances: Sam Fish forever frolicked freely and Diana Price consented to give a repeat cheer performance. Someone insisted that Basketball was never too used, so a volunteer team was organized for a day's entertainment. The track team gained perpetual fame and consequently drew most of the crowd, but there was one who refused to pay homage . . . he, too, was a star. The swim team wasn't to be overlooked—not by Joylene Harvey, not by David Warner, not by Darien Pope, not by Peggy Dennis or Ronnie Chodos. The Show was for everyone and that meant equal time.

Up on the Rooftop, Click, Click, Click, Etc.

Awfully Strange Butterflies

Hereabouts in Monrovia

The Show, they said, needed a little umph, so once the basketball season ended, the young men of the campus ran around the track a lot, especially the VARSITY and the B teams. Ran, that is, until some kid got kicked in the head by a butterfly. Donna Lawrence was dubious and Susan Kangas wanted her money back. Sue transferred to another place and got the lead in "The Visit." They liked her there, so she stayed. As President of Boys' League, Rance Reed stopped running and rode his bike. "Sure," said Patty Perkins, "sure and I'm a movie star in Venice." Irene almost believed her. Insane? You bet, but the people applauded and were more than usually attentive; in fact, very attentive. Mark Smith told Mr. Hill, and they both laughed and planned to stay for the third act. That was a nice gesture. We even applaud nice gestures.

People wanted to act. Their performances would be commemorated by a bronze plaque in the gym . . . or somewhere. But Willie Jackson wasn't concerned with meaningless posterity. He had read somewhere that importance was now or never. Song Girls performed . . . for spirit and nostalgic purposes. The Frosh-Soph and Varsity baseball teams laughed at sentimentality, hit the ball, and laughed again; someone whispered that they would probably laugh like that 30 years from now, but that it wouldn't mean anything then. Cisco Lobaco set the attitude of the Golf team; he insisted upon sophistication and suggested only chuckling.

A committee was appointed to discuss all attitudes, and it was decided that, after all, The Show was for nostalgia, something to be looked back on.

Sam Fish Flounders Frantically for Fun, Frolic

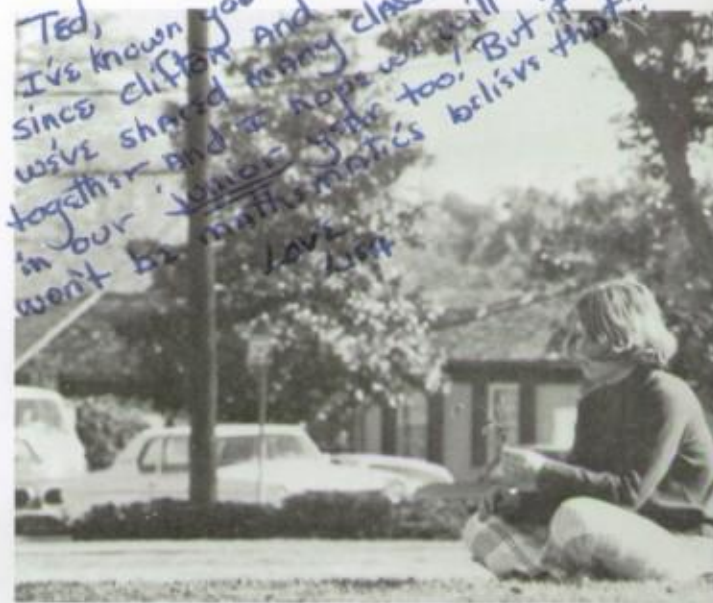

It is important to know that a person can't fly without jumping off something, but Larry Jones had to find out for himself (if the wildcat could distort, he could fly); not even Barbara Gholar tried to stop him . . . actors have to captivate their audience, you know: Sam Fish never ceased to amaze the people; Paul Weaver, famous for making others famous, captured the moment that he dared himself into the deep-end. Virginia Davis refused to smile for the camera; she couldn't understand why Larry couldn't fly. Even Mr. Malodowich, with his mathematical formulas, couldn't convince her. It took Susanne Thomas, notorious for making believers out of skeptics, to force a confession of feigned innocence from Virginia. David Warner refused to pay any attention to this nothingness, he was an existentialist; Jeanene Johnson wasn't, she knew that she had a universal purpose.

The Show Is Never So Sophisticated That a Birthday Can't Be Celebrated

Is exaggerated truth ever justified? "Really," said John Hostetter, who had just turned eighteen and went to the beach to celebrate the destruction of boyhood and kites. There would be replacements: Bradbury or Fedco Bumps to name but the most obvious. Others joined in the celebration—Jamie Sullivan shot a basket, Bill Freeman did something with nylon on the Pep Stage, a freshman type contemplated a weed on the front lawn, and finally, Pam Mirly went Old West, scratched her head and swore never to shoot off anyone's kneecaps. John was awfully appreciative. Then he went to the Principal's Office and registered with Selective Service.

Solemnity is a big word and once, when it fit the people, one of those spur-of-the-moment pep rallies was held. Only one Pep Cat showed up, so most of the people decided that spirit was just mind over matter and went to lunch. The JV baseball team didn't bother with lunch that day; it lined up in rows on the field. Coach Katich complained of the track team being in the way. Well, that's how the day went. Some people sought refuge in Mr. Jansson's room: Terry Cannon contemplated on . . . contemplation, and Martha Laird took the floor—she smiled. It was a futile attempt to get the part of Claire Zachanassian, but like everything else, it didn't fit. Farquhar once said that those who know the least obey the best. He could say that kind of thing, but to think that thought and then to express that kind of thought in a classroom is deadly, viper deadly. There would be a mean kind of laughter, and who wants that sort of thing directed at himself. Who has those kinds of guts?

Problems (Kaos) arose, and no one was paying any attention to the NO DUMPING sign. It was off in a Corner where no one would notice it anyway. Meanwhile, most people milled contentedly . . . except for Robert Pensive; he could see what was happening. And when he informed Bob Aldrich—he wrote the editorial for The Wildcat—he did so for action. But the article stopped all action, temporarily. Even Roger Rasmussen was stunned by the “messy” facts. But, of course, everyone recovered. After all, pollution is a national problem.

When things slowed down and bright lights dimmed and Miss Stunden dozed in the halls, Mrs. Campbell and Mr. York performed their chorus girl act; they probably picked it up in Las Vegas . . . Bill Burrud says it's one of the sin cities of the world. But there is a sober side to everything —Act III, Dee's.

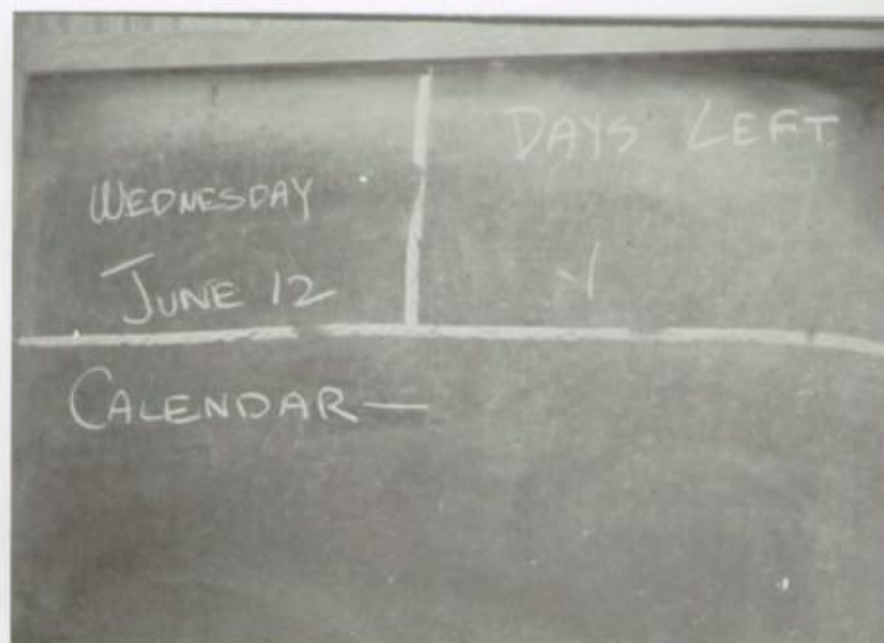

The wrestling team was the force behind control—Dan Hernandez laughed and said the muscle wasn't obvious, but he was the one who cringed behind first base when Larry Larsen decided to get tough. Coach Tony Stillson was that way, too, especially with basketball referees. Someone knew Stillson's policies; he went out for swimming. Mike Bailey thought the whole thing was unreal, but it was rumored that he applauded even the worst act in the dark of the auditorium. Lots of people do that you know, when no one's looking.

Teddy, I'm sort of hard for me to think of anything to write, but I guess it's a try. Or really surprised me when I first talked to you.
 I was so easy. Even though you constantly give me a bad time. I'm glad I know you, Teddy. Take care of Jim for me. Julie

The March Skies Rained; Shephard Shot Baskets

A lady's baby got taken away in the third act. Yes, it was melodramatic, and nobody liked the feathered woman who did the taking. Bob Shephard was too concerned with basketball to be bothered. When the days began dwindling, Barbi Livingston and Larry Williams talked about the problem, tossed about the possibilities. Everybody said he was concerned and ate chocolate covered peanuts. Off in the Student Store, Kathy Thurston sold combs and smiled pretty smiles. She did a good job, and people liked her. Where had the baby gone? It doesn't matter. Nobody's important, and Tuesday's bridge day. It could have been a very serious situation, but nobody quite knew what serious meant any more, and there weren't many who could spell SERIOUS correctly. It rained in March, and some of the people thought that would be a good month to learn how to spell.

It was Act III, and the performers began to show the wear and tear of a long performance. The zip, even Candy Haertling's zip, seemed to flag. Even when Ron Dobes shouted "Lay off, man," his fellow JV basketball players stood there and posed and looked serious and somehow theatrical. Coach Artie Jenkins just looked tired. Duane Schuil, ever on the lookout for bigger thumps, thought all the big thumps had been thumped. And Coach Stanley opposed corners to teach proper buoyancy. Isolated the sub points eerily at the shiny knight 'cause the knight had a fuller mustache; then again it might have been merely the sketch we found of the bell tower on a smoggy day. Did anybody really care? Actually, no.

Teddy,
 Keep Christ

The Smart People Are Joylene Harvey, Terry Cannon

Can fish see the snow falling? How come they can? Can they come how? Questions . . . Joy and Terry ask them and chew them and weigh them and, Joy, at least, spits them out as answers and better questions. Terry thinks a lot. The thinking shows as a quiet but quivering thing, alive but somehow not flamboyantly so. They — both of them — don't look alike. They should. Joy is prettier, but not flashily so. No flash at all to Terry. He writes good papers, but so does Joy . . . and hers are prettier. Terry knows about a school in Orange County that has a moat around it. Joy knows about Laugharne and Da Mao Petacaa. They don't need to know any more.

Diana, Steve, Ron Alive and Spirited

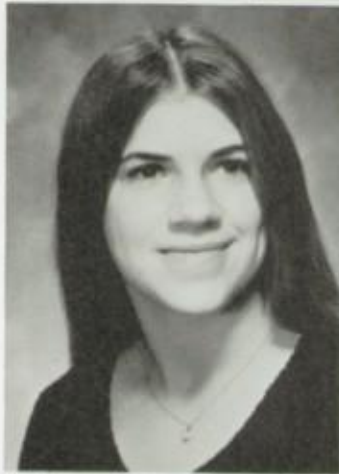

There are three people, cheer people—Diana Price, Ron Peterson, and Steve McConnell—who are thought of as spirited—which may mean that they jump around in earnest a good deal, or just that eyes glitter, or just that they are afflicted with aggressive spasticism. But we don't think so. We think that they are normal and more than that, they are determinedly spirited, even flushing with aliveness of a positive sort, the kind that screams YOUTH and FUN and I AM.

Look Nice to MHS Seniors

"Appearances are often deceiving" is something we didn't mention when it was found that Mark Smith and Vicki Harris were applied to Looks. We noticed "East is East and West is West and Never the Twain Shall Meet" is a thing Vicki knew wasn't true. We noted that an emotional correspondence through the eyes was a part of her. We considered Mark for a minute, and decided that he wasn't as "out-going" as before, but that it wasn't as important as before. "Pensive," "understated," "deliberate" fit now. The Show needed Baubles and it wanted charisma. We thought it was fortunate there was also a bit more to V. Harris and M. Smith.

Forty of the, the blue people, with most of us aspiring to their ranks. They are useful people and look as right on campus as the Tower. Madquins and Monarchs they are called, and they are called to raise the flag and guard doors and frisk in the snow and protect the Big M. Joannie, Shep— Truly Our Very Best

Look them up in Who's Who in ten years; they'll be there, Joannie Gholar and Bob Shephard. We can say they went to Monrovia High and got picked OUTSTANDING there. They are both wise choices, sane and logical. Look at Shep and you know he'll be happy and secure and rich and . . . and Joannie will be easy in her easiness, lovely mother with absolutely no afternoon soap operas. Let Shep watch "As the World Turns" as he grips his can of Coor's. They are we at our best, and did you ever hear of anyone who didn't like either one? He can shoot baskets; she can watch with the most intense eyes in the world. He's so big; she's so little. They happened to us, and we lucked out. Yes, we really did.

I Was a Senior
on the Wooden Benches, Empty in the Rain,
That Squatted Solidly and Listened to the Thunder of a Year
Happy on a New Patio, Loud in the Gym,
Solemn on the Field.

And I Remember

going into the five-and-ten and looking at pinwheels and fake make-up kits.
bringing home my puppy in the car.
wanting to live in the shoe with the old lady.
sneaking through the dairy with you to say hello to the cows. sneezing as I lay down, so that the sneeze would sprinkle my face.
self-consciously wearing my new glasses to school.
my second grade teacher having a face like a peach.
staying with my dog while she died.
bringing back signed report cards.
trying to catch the falling rain drops in my mouth.
broken, sad, sad water fountains. watching my balloon float up, out of reach and away.
pondering over dirty, empty cages at the zoo.
watching you shave your first shave.
watching eyes catch mine in Lower Main.

Ed,
What have you been up to? I sure miss rapping with you only I know that it doesn't really matter
I know you're far out & understanding & I hope you'll always be. Take Care
Amy
Dana

Try Ted,
It is always fun having you in my stupid class. Even though I can't see you half the time. Keep cool in the summer so don't get drunk, it will stunt your growth.

Conf. Ed. [Signature]

THEN I said good-bye to Cats and kittens, Ripped the Band Aids off old wounds,
And knew enough to brush my teeth.
That was the early evening they Lined us up, capped, gowned,
And marched us onto the field
Like a ghost parade,
The haunts of '71.
We weren't going to the zoo,
Not even to the parade;
Somebody would instruct us
Carefully,
Direct us with a smile and lots of teeth
To one of the wet benches,
Where we would have trouble
Munching on an apple
And remembering to remember.

Teddy,

I met a really nice person with lots of personality - when I simply said "Who's he?" It's been fun in Spanish and geometry - hope to see you next year - good luck always

Love

Jaclyn

It is a nice bathtub of light blue porcelain, a work of great artistic beauty for The Show. We are well acquainted with the manufacturer's establishment in Paris. It will look good, be functional, in the boys' gym.

Harold Bacchus loved grapes. Though he wasn't a juicer, he was a graper and didn't like clothes very much. He was popular.

I ed, Hope I have you in classes next year so we can get kicked out. Don't get too messed up this summer and when you take it, take it long and hard.

The Show Is Over.
Everyone Has Gone.
But Have They Really Left
The Show Behind?

TEDDY BEAR,

I thought ABOUT WHAT TO WRITE FOR A LONG time, but no WORDS CAN POSSIBLY COMMUNICATE WHAT I REALLY WANT TO SAY. I LOVE you AS if you were my brother and I know I CAN ALWAYS trust you with my secrets. You're too good to spread rumors or anything LIKE THAT. ALthough you're SMALL in size, you're big in what really counts, your heart & mind. We've known each other A LONG time & I think you're one of the nicest, cutest guys I know. If you ever need me, just CALL, okay?

LOVE ya,
NORA

Teddy's
Have fun over the summer. Good luck
Bob

Teddy,

Well, I really can't believe that the year is over. It's gone too fast for me. It has been really fun too - & you helped to make it that way. We've become better friends and I'm thankful for it because you are such a nice person -
Have fun this summer &
I will see you "hell-week".

Love.

Teddy happy im very happy that our friendship has been renewed.
You're a good person.
